

TRAVEL SEASON 2020-2021

Like our guests who travel with us year after year, we look forward to the day when we could sail through Patagonia again.

Despite properly preparing and establishing the necessary security protocols to avoid possible infections, the current uncertainty in the tourism industry, the restrictions for international travel, as well as the constant changes in the variables that are generated by the Covid-19 pandemic, have led us to make the difficult decision to cancel all our scheduled trips for the 2020-2021 season, and thus concentrate all our energy to resume our operation for the next 2021-2022 season.

As an expedition cruise, our main motivation has always been to provide a unique experience in an atmosphere of warmth and safety, astonishing our passengers with the spectacular nature of our route, serving them with an excellent service, and providing them the opportunity to live moments of peace and disconnection provided by the unspoiled landscapes of Tierra del Fuego. Today, the uncertainty and the effects of the pandemic make it difficult for us to offer an experience with absolute tranquility and relaxation, without apprehensions or worries.

We are the first to regret this painful decision motivated by a situation that is clearly beyond our control, and we sincerely empathize with our loyal customers and business partners who have been with us in these 30 years of operation. We will focus on working hard to resume our operation and welcome you back on board next year.

Those passengers who have reservations with us for the 2020-2021 season may reschedule their trip for the following season or may request a refund.

Our service channels will remain open to assist you and clarify any questions.
